Testimonial

"I sought out mental health counselling after having been through a couple of life events, understanding my two son's diagnoses and learning how best to support them and then finally navigating through separation and divorce. I had seen a few counsellors in the past and although they did help and gave me strategies, I never felt as though there was a connection made that was conducive to helping me with what I needed. I knew journaling helped, I knew how to breathe, I knew the importance of vulnerability but I didn't know how to be brave. I just knew I needed to be brave and I needed to have courage to be able to feel true joy and happiness in my life again.

Personally, I felt as though I was drowning in my life. I have always felt the challenges of being extremely introverted in an extroverted driven world and I didn't know how to get the help I needed for myself to feel satisfied and happy in my own skin. My McMan mental health counsellor saved my life. She helped me slowly peel the layers of armour off that I had been trudging around with for years. She helped me, for the first time, be able to tell my story. She listened. My time with the mental health counsellor has helped me speak up and transform the way I think and feel about myself. The process is hard work, but the experience has been life changing. As terrified as I was to see yet another counselor that might give me more strategies and not really understand the turmoil that I was dealing with, I took the opportunity to talk to the counsellor. She was a coach for me, my encourager, my supporter, my guide and my challenger. She would see the roadblocks ahead and encourage me to be kind to myself and she challenged me to push the roadblocks out of the way.

Many times, she would get me to a place where all I could think of was, "I never thought about it like that", and the challenge that seemed unattainable to me at first, seemed manageable after working through it with her. Even though I have a lot to get through ahead of me, I definitely feel the strength within me to be able to get through the rough days."

Program Success Story

Facing Covid-19 restrictions, the programs in Edson rallied to develop creative and innovative ways to not only maintain contact with individuals but have meaningful strategies to continue to assist them to fulfill their hopes and goals. During times when it was unsafe to meet in person, they created weekly zoom meetings with an identified topic for that session. These topics involved doing science experiments and educational discussions that included learning their rights as tenants and recognizing abuse.

In addition, individuals completed a vision board where they identified what goals they wanted to work on. Goals of attending concerts or taking tours of facilities were done virtually. From their wishes to travel, the "Travelling Armchair" was created. From the safety and comfort of their home and supplied with a plane ticket and passport, individuals travelled to places around the world and learned about different cultures, traditions, food, and language.

An unanticipated outcome of the way the programs delivered services was that many individuals who typically shy away from groups and avoid participating in activities excelled in participating virtually. Staff and family members have reported that these individuals have become more confident, vocal and have met their goals much quicker.

President's Message

My name is Chad Evans and I am humbled and honored to have been the President of the Provincial Board of Directors over the last year.

2020 our world changed; with a Global Pandemic, McMan's commitment to ensure the safety of its staff and clients was paramount. McMan rose to the challenges of the pandemic, while continuing to provide quality services to children, youth, adults and families. Today, our efforts continue to support Alberta's most vulnerable, as demonstrated by the accomplishments highlighted in this year's Annual Report. The commitment to quality and innovative programming demonstrated by McMan staff has not wavered during this pandemic.

Highlights from the year included:

While the pandemic stretched and challenged us to change our operations, service delivery and the way we collaborate with one another, we quickly adapted to the changing needs of our staff, clients and communities.

Calgary Region launched three new programs:

McMan Family Resource Network - Okotoks:

a community hub that provides a range of services and programming for children, youth, and families in Okotoks and surrounding communities.

The James House: provides safe and stable housing options and individualized supports for 27 individuals who are facing homelessness. Residents of the James House may face a range of challenges including mental health issues, disabilities, and significant financial barriers. Through our innovative service delivery model, individuals transition into permanent housing within a 10-month time frame.

Mental Health Program: provides critical mental health and wellness services to clientele across all programs. Funded by community supporters, since the launch of the program, we provided 121 youth, individuals and families with over 250 counselling hours. Funds raised also supported over 200 youth who took part in our Dialectical Behaviour Therapy (DBT) mental health and wellness groups.

Central Region opened six Family Resource Networks over this last year. With the addition of Family Resource Networks and expansion of existing programs we moved six program locations throughout the region to larger space for service delivery. As well, several Grants received by Central Region throughout the year ensured targeted and isolated communities were supported through the ongoing pandemic crisis.

McMan South was awarded three contracts with the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General this year. The contracts are for Drug Treatment Court in Medicine Hat, Drug Treatment Court in Lethbridge and Gang Exit in Lethbridge. This is a great opportunity for the South to diversify their funder portfolio.

McMan Edmonton and North completed their three year implementation of the CARE Model and responded to a critical need by establishing a safe and supportive place for children and youth with COVID-19.

Our success is the community's success.

With the ongoing support of our funders, donors, partners, Board and volunteers, McMan Youth, Family and Community Services Association is ready for the challenges and achievements ahead in 2021/22.
